The Body of Christ: Physical, Sacramental, Ecclesial

We began to explore last time the somewhat complicated terminology involved in the mystery of the real presence in the Eucharist. Following up on that, this week I’d like to shed light on the term “body of Christ,” focusing on the distinct modalities by which Christ is present to us.

We’ve already noted that when we eat the Eucharist, we’re not chewing on Jesus’s arm, for instance, and so we’ve already made an important distinction. One mode of Jesus’s presence is certainly his presence in his physical body, the body of the Jesus who lived in first-century Palestine and died on Calvary. This body, like each of ours, was limited by space and time.

A second mode of his presence is that found in the Eucharist: a sacramental presence, whereby Christ is present not exactly as he was in the first century, but in a special way in the consecrated elements (the host and precious blood, appearing to us as bread and wine). Hence when the Eucharistic minister raises the host and says “the body of Christ,” what is meant is the sacramental body (mode 2), not the physical body of the first century (mode 1).

Again, we should not think of this presence as less real than the presence in his physical body. It simply is different. The sacramental presence, of course, depends on Christ having a physical body in the first place. But the sacramental presence is the new way of expressing his presence in the period of mission—the period that began with his ascension and ends only on the “last day.”

In a sense, by taking up simple bread and wine to be his sacramental body and blood, Jesus is giving us a glimpse of the “new creation,” when all creation finds its place in him (Eph 1:10). Until that day, the Church is nourished by the sacramental presence of Christ so that it might effectively witness to the fact that Christ is alive and that death doesn’t have the last word.

And this leads us to the third mode, which is the ecclesial presence, or the presence of Christ in his body, the Church (see Col 1:18). As the sacramental presence depends on the physical presence but is distinguished from it, so too the ecclesial presence (mode 3) depends on the sacramental presence (mode 2) but is distinguished from it. St. Paul recognizes this when he says that the bread and cup are participations in the body and blood of Christ and make us into one body though we are many people (1 Cor 10:16-17). The Lord shares his presence sacramentally in the Eucharist (the means) in order that we continually be transformed into a Eucharistic people, a people whose goal is to be brought into perfect communion with God and one another (the end). Sacramental presence exists for the time of mission. Ecclesial presence, on the other hand, lasts forever and finds its fulfillment when we as resurrected people stand with the resurrected Lord.

If (read: when) you pay attention to the Eucharist Prayer, you’ll witness this dynamic between mode 2 and mode 3. The priest first consecrates the elements (e.g., “... make holy these gifts”) and then the people (“grant that we ... may become one body, one spirit in Christ”). With our single “Amen” in the communion line, we say “yes” both to Jesus’s real presence in the Eucharist and to his real presence in his Eucharistic Church.

Open Our Hearts in Welcome Campaign Update!

Our humble thanks to the parishioners who have graciously honored their pledge commitments to our Open Our Hearts in Welcome capital campaign! We are in our 3rd year of the 5-year timeline and are grateful for your incredible generosity. At the close of July 2019, we are anxiously awaiting roughly $2M in pledged gifts and hopeful to receive some new donations too. If you are new to St. James, or if you did not have the means to support the campaign previously, or if you have already supported but would like to increase your gift, please contact Julie Cohen, Development Director at jcohen@stjamesah.org. If you are on schedule with your pledge payment but would like to pay off the remaining amount, we would indeed welcome that!

In the coming weeks a letter will be sent to all parishioners with further information on the progress of the campaign.

It is with great praise that we, a community of hopeful believers, have created such a beautiful worship space inside and out. Thank you, St. James Parish, for opening your hearts and welcoming all who wish to journey in faith with you.
