The Solemnity of All Saints

A MESSAGE FROM...

As I write this, I'm perfectly aware that many of you may have voted already and that this article will not make or break your decision. That being said, because conscience formation is a lifelong process for everyone except know-it-alls, there's no reason to give up on offering a few more insights into Catholic Social Teaching. In this final installment, I'd like to turn our attention to the s-words: solidarity and subsidiarity, that is.

Solidarity is standing with and for others, and it finds its foundation in our belief that God, in Jesus Christ, came into everlasting solidarity with us when he became human. Jesus shared in our sufferings to the point of death so that we might share in his glory. From his example we see that being in solidarity means acting with a deep care and concern for all members of humanity, without discriminating based on age, born/unborn status, economic class, legal standing, race, etc. Solidarity thus involves a firm commitment to the common good, directing our individual preferences and positions to the service of our neighbors before ourselves.

No doubt solidarity can and has been feigned (what Cardinal Cupich has called “signpost solidarity”) or narrowly interpreted to mean solidarity only with my particular group, party, culture, or nation (what Pope Francis has recently dubbed a “local narcissism”). Christians who reduce solidarity in this way are, to put it lightly, liars. Especially in an age of increased globalization and digitalization, we have to be aware that entering into another's suffering (and joy) means more than just sending a supportive emoji to friends. It involves responsibly stepping into relationship with those who are suffering, even with those viewed as enemies.

Rooted in the concept of solidarity is what the church calls the preferential option for the poor and vulnerable (the unborn, the disabled, the terminally ill, the marginalized, etc.). When we make laws, policies, or decisions, we're obliged to consider how they will affect those who may not have any other advocates or may be under- or mis-represented. This preferential option shouldn't be understood as saying that the poor and vulnerable have more human dignity than others—as if our inestimable dignity could be quantified. Rather, we have to understand it as a way of first defending and promoting those who are typically the first to be overlooked.

With a proper understanding of the preferential option, questions such as “what's in this tax proposal for me?” or “how will this environmental policy make my life a little harder?” give way to ones like “will this proposal adversely and disproportionately affect the most vulnerable?” or “are there people affected who have not had any real representation in this decision-making process?” Some say that what talks is money or power. If that's the case, then it's largely because Christians have failed in their mission to be a prophetic people, lending their voice to those who are not yet strong enough to stand up for themselves.

But here's where subsidiarity comes in. We step in precisely where people can't stand up for themselves. In other words, we don't micromanage; we aim to empower and equip a person to live as freely and well as he or she can. Whatever a smaller unit (like a person or family) can do responsibly well for itself and the common good, it should do, without needless interference from larger institutions.

Catholic Social Teaching reminds us that society is a network of relationships, and the fundamental unit of society is the family where a husband and wife, open to the generosity of God especially in the form of children, nurture a life of committed love. Other institutions can't replace the family; they can only complement it. But nor can a family replace higher social institutions, whether local, state, federal, or international. Each has its own tasks and legitimacy.

By this principle, we don't advocate for a government to step in and act as parent in an otherwise functioning family; but in situations of child abuse or neglect, there needs to be an intervention. Likewise, we wouldn't expect even the most normal, functional nuclear family to be able to make decisions for the country on international trade or domestic monetary policy; that belongs to competent people who have been invested with legitimate authority in those areas.

I hope these articles have been helpful in getting us to think more critically about our participation in the public sphere—a participation that extends beyond Nov. 3. If you have any questions or would like to discuss anything I've written, please don't hesitate to contact me.

Fr. Ryan

LIFE TEEN

Encounter Nights

RE went semi- virtual! This year our students spend about 75% of their time using a remote learning platform to continue catechesis. The other 25% is in-person once a month. We've invited our students and their families to join us for Encounter nights. Encounter allows us to pray, sing, and worship together as a community. It is Jesus who binds us together and gives us our mission as Christians. It is through the love of Jesus and the presence of the Holy Spirit we are going to grow together during the pandemic. If you are interested in learning more about RE and our Encounter nights, please contact Kevin Byrnes at kbyrnes@stjamesah.org

Laine is a senior at John Hersey High School and serves as one of our teen leaders at St. James. She recently gave her testimony and shared how God has been working in her life through LIFETEEN. In the end, she encouraged the teens to be open to the “God Moments,” the ways they will encounter God this year. Thank you for your witness, Laine!

Registration is still open! To register for LIFETEEN for the year:

LITURGY & WORSHIP

As we yearn for healing in our world and nation, prayer can have a transformative power in our relationships and actions and bring us a deeper sense of peace. Pope Francis shared these thoughts on the need for prayer:

“One of the most effective ways we have to help is that of prayer. Prayer unites us; it makes us brothers and sisters. It is in prayer that our hearts find the strength not to be cold and insensitive in the face of injustice. I would like to invite you to pray together, for one another, with one another. That way we can keep helping one another to experience the joy of knowing that Jesus is in our midst, and that Jesus helps us to find solutions to the injustices which He Himself already experienced.”

With Pope Francis’s words in mind, please know that St. James is here for you to offer a quiet place for prayer and reflection. Both the church and the Adoration Chapel are open from 6:30 AM until 8 PM for private prayer. Reservations for a time slot in the Adoration Chapel can be made here or by visiting the kiosk outside the chapel on the lower level of the church.
